GreenWeaver
In support of the University’s Climate Action Plan, gowns and caps for Penn’s Class of 2016 come from a sustainable line of graduation wear named GreenWeaver. The gowns are made from fabric spun from molten plastic pellets which come from 100 percent, post-consumer recycled plastic bottles. It takes an average of 23 bottles to make each gown which is comfortably soft and virtually indistinguishable in color, feel or fit from traditional polyester material. Penn, the first Ivy League institution to commit to this product, has been offering the GreenWeaver line since 2010.
