Purpose The 12-item scale was designed to assess individual differences in four separate domains of dream experience: vividness, usefulness, recall, and importance (the degree to which dreams feel personally relevant). Developers intended the scale to function as a tool for “studying the consequences and correlates of dreams” [1] – a measure providing insight into the nature and function of personal differences in dreaming.

Population for Testing The scale has been validated with individuals aged 17–50 years.

Administration A short, self-report, paper-and-pencil measure, the MDI requires less than 5 min for administration.

Reliability and Validity Developers Kallmeyer and Chang [1] have analyzed the scale’s psychometric properties and have found an internal consistency ranging from .64 to .73. They also demonstrated that the scale’s four factors – labeled importance, vividness, usefulness, and recall – account for 66.7% of the variance.

Scoring Using a 5-point, Likert-type scale, respondents indicate the degree to which they agree with a variety of statements about dreaming. The scale ranges from 1, meaning “strongly disagree,” to 5, “strongly agree.” Higher scores denote a greater endorsement of each of the scale’s four factors, indicating a higher degree of importance, vividness, usefulness, and recall ascribed by the respondent to his or her dreams.
Multidimensional Dream Inventory

1. I think dreams can have personal meaning
2. My dreams have colours
3. I believe that dreams can predict the future
4. I remember my dreams in the morning at least once a week
5. I feel that every dream has a specific meaning
6. My dreams have sound
7. I have dreams that help me deal with problems in waking life
8. I often remember my dreams when I wake up
9. I believe that dreams reveal something about the dreamer’s personality
10. I often feel emotions when I dream
11. If I had a dream that “gave me advice,” I would follow that advice
12. I remember my dreams when I wake up, but I often forget them quickly

1 = Strongly Agree
5 = Strongly Disagree
