• Build capacity via sustainable health training and care programs
• Advance research and consequent care targeted to specific disease burdens that complement and benefit from existing strengths at Penn Medicine
• Serve as the focal point at Penn to build an intellectual community with passion for and knowledge in GH
• Guide the development of Penn Medicine and partner trainees
• Empower and support our faculty in GH pursuits through career guidance, administrative services, and in the acquisition of funding to meet their GH objectives
• Firmly entrench Penn Medicine as a leader in GH through well-defined programs that distinguish our institution
The CGH pillars:

- Build Tomorrow’s Leaders in global health
- Advance key Global Health Imperatives
- Establish Regional Centers of Engagement
- Unite the Penn Global Health Community
The Vietnam Project: goals

- Work with the Vingroup to build a new university – VinUni: founding schools Medicine, Nursing, Business, Engineering and Technology (accreditation expected)
- Work with VinUni to develop the undergraduate curriculum, and aligned faculty and support structures in nursing and medicine (international boards expected)
- Support Vinmec to enhance the quality of care and of clinical training at Vinmec International Hospital Times City in Hanoi (JCI accredited)
- Work collaboratively with VinUni and Vinmec to develop a research portfolio focused on translational medicine
- Support Vinmec in establishing postgraduate medical training programs and hospital staff development in Hanoi
The Vietnam Project: approach

- These are their schools and hospitals – not Penn’s
- Model is to be the lead organization in helping THEM plan and execute the goals – an Alliance
- Penn’s role is primarily in project design and workforce development
- There are no co-naming rights – the alliance may refer only to Penn’s specific roles
- Penn participates in the VinUni and Vinmec governance structure
The Project Advantages

- Ultimate goal to improve health by serving Vietnamese population at large
  - 96M population with poor awareness of preventative medicine, a disparity in access to health care and inconsistent quality of care provision
  - Set a national if not regional model of health profession training and excellence in care
  - Develop a pipeline of health care professionals
  - Tie these individuals to scholarship in a university environment
The Project Advantages

- An excellent fit to our missions
  - Spans UM/NE-GM/NE, care and research
  - Great opportunity to engage and coalesce Penn faculty and trainees with a global passion
  - Similarly, to stimulate others who might be thinking about global work but with no entre
  - A terrific opportunity for Penn to innovate in medical/nursing education
  - Access to the study of novel populations and diseases
  - Distinctive environment for our trainees of all types and interest areas
  - Unites medicine and nursing, and in time others at Penn in a common goal
