David Satcher, MD, PhD is Director of the Satcher Health Leadership Institute at the Morehouse School of Medicine (SHLI/MSM), which was established in 2006. He is also professor of Community Health and Preventive Medicine, Family Medicine, and Psychiatry at MSM. Since returning to the Morehouse School of Medicine, he has served as founding Director of the National Center for Primary Care (NCPC) and as Interim President of the Morehouse School of Medicine.

Prior to 2002, Dr. Satcher served as Director of the CDC, Assistant Secretary for Health, and Surgeon General of the United States, making him only the second person in history to serve simultaneously as Surgeon General and Assistant Secretary for Health. As Surgeon General, Dr. Satcher released the first ever Surgeons General Reports on Mental Health, Oral Health, Sexual Health, and Overweight and Obesity. As Assistant Secretary for Health, he led the development of Healthy People 2010 where the goal of eliminating disparities in health was first articulated and served on the WHO Commission on Social Determinants of Health.

Dr. Satcher has received over 50 honorary degrees and numerous leadership awards. Additional leadership roles have included, Interim Dean & CEO at King Drew and past President of Meharry Medical College. Dr. Satcher is an avid rower and jogger who promotes the Surgeons General Prescription for personal behavior. He is married to the former Nola Richardson and enjoys spending time with his children and grandchildren.

Cindy W. Christian, MD holds The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia endowed Chair in the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect, is a Professor of Pediatrics at the Perelman School of Medicine at The University of Pennsylvania and serves as an Assistant Dean in the medical school’s Program of Diversity and Inclusion. For more than two decades, she directed the child abuse program at CHOP. In 2010, Dr. Christian was appointed as the first medical director for the Philadelphia Department of Human Services, leading the development of policies and strategies to improve the health of Philadelphia’s dependent children. Dr. Christian devotes much of her clinical and academic work to the care of abused children.

Said Ibrahim, MD, MPH is a Tenured Professor of Medicine in the University of Pennsylvania’s Perelman School of Medicine. He is also Co-Director of the VA National Center of Innovation for Health Equity Research and Promotion (CHERP) and Director of the Philadelphia VA Medical Center CHERP. Dr. Ibrahim has conducted quantitative and qualitative research on racial/ethnic disparities in access to health care. As Co-Director of CHERP, Dr. Ibrahim also leads a partnership of two robust VA Medical Centers and their academic affiliates with strengths in health services research, epidemiology, economics, psychometrics, and quantitative and qualitative data analysis to reduce disparities in health and health care among vulnerable groups of veterans.

Giang Nguyen, MD, MPH, MSCE, FAAFP is a family physician and faculty member at the University of Pennsylvania. His academic interests include LGBT health, Asian immigrant health, and primary care. He is also Medical Director for Penn Family Care, where he also provides direct care a diverse panel of patients (many of whom are LGB-identified, transgender, or non-English speaking Vietnamese immigrants). Dr. Nguyen created the Penn Asian Health Initiatives in 2004, a resource for community engagement, mentorship, and research on the health of Asian Americans. He also regularly teaches medical students and residents about LGBT health, works with non-profit LGBT organizations, and is a senior fellow at the new Penn Medicine Program for LGBT Health.

Daniel Polsky, PhD Executive Director of the Leonard Davis Institute of Health Economics, is a Professor of Medicine in the Perelman School of Medicine and the Robert D. Eilers Professor of Health Care Management in the Wharton School. He currently serves on the Congressional Budget Office’s Panel of Health Advisers and he was the Senior Economist on health issues at the President’s Council of Economic Advisers in 2007-08. His research areas include access to health care, workforce, and economic evaluation of medical and behavioral health interventions. He is a coauthor of the book “Economic Evaluation in Clinical Trials” published by Oxford University Press.

Dr. Marilyn Sommers is the Lillian S. Brunner Professor of Medical Surgical Nursing at the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing. She studies injury related to sexual assault and risk-taking behaviors in vulnerable populations at risk for health outcomes disparities. Her populations of interest (women, older adolescents, young adults) who live in poverty have poorer health than those who do not, and bear a larger burden of injury and violence. She teaches a doctoral level course on Health Equity, is on the Advisory Council for the LGBT Center at Penn and for Gender, Sexuality, and Women’s Studies, and directs a post-doctoral NIH training program, Research Training to Study Vulnerable Women, Children, and Families.