Overview

This activity is designed to efficiently discuss the most recent clinical advances in oncology. The meeting will address the questions that have emerged from the latest data presented at major international annual meetings. Activity format will provide the opportunity for interaction with Penn Medicine faculty and other attendees. Participants will gain up-to-date, practical information with immediate clinical application, as well as a technical and scientific background on the current state of the field and emerging advances.

Who Should Attend

This activity has been designed for medical, surgical, and radiation oncologists, hematologists/oncologists, hematology/oncology fellows, radiologists, neuro-oncologists, thoracic surgeons, urologists, gastroenterologists, pulmonologists, dermatologists, oncology nurses, and other healthcare professionals involved in the treatment of patients with cancer.

Learning Objectives

Upon completion of this conference, participants should be able to:

- Identify recent advances in immunotherapy for cancer treatment
- Implement new clinical findings to a broad range of tumor types
- Identify issues related to extent of therapy by genomics, stage, and patient condition
