MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR

Dear Faculty, Staff and Trainees,

It is hard to believe that the end of 2020 is upon us! Time certainly flies although, at many points, this year seemed to go on for an eternity. Seldom has it been such a relief to see a year come to an end. Phew!!!

We have much to look forward to in 2021. We are vaccinating many people in PSOM and UPHS and many of our own clinicians will be invited to make an appointment to receive the first dose of the vaccine shortly. At the same time, the inpatient COVID-19 census across the health system has been going down steadily and I am hopeful that our community will heed the advice to avoid yet another surge. While all of this does not mean we can all pitch our masks and forget about physical distancing, it is the proverbial light at the end of the tunnel. Knowing that we will soon see a dwindling of the pandemic and a return to something closer to normalcy is a huge relief. Of course, we are unlikely to go back to how it used to be exactly and none of us know for sure what it will be like, but we do know it will be much less confining than our current situation.

We have lots of work to do in terms of caring for those who are suffering from mental illness, working towards developing an anti-racist culture for the department and beyond, and working to drive discovery and educate young minds. We also know that the economic devastation of the virus will also affect our community’s mental health and some of us are likely feeling the impact of unemployment.
personally, with family members losing jobs or income. We also have much to be grateful for. We have a wonderful department doing work that is impactful. We have the privilege of working for an institution that, for the most part, has managed not to need to make lay-offs, decrease wages or furlough employees. As I have mentioned before, altruism and gratitude are key to resilience!

I want to end this last Wednesday message of the year by thanking you for all you do and urging you to find some time to rest and take care of yourself as we transition to 2021. Please remember your routines in terms of eating, sleeping and exercise and may 2021 be filled with health and peace for you and your loved ones.

Warmly, m
